JOSEPH PULL

Mr. Pull has represented or advised clients concerning shareholder disputes, business valuation, trust instruments and administration, commercial contracts, alleged breaches of fiduciary duty, legal malpractice, and federal regulatory interpretation, among other matters. He graduated from Yale Law School in 2006 and served as a law clerk to Judge James B. Loken, United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, before spending several years practicing commercial and government enforcement litigation at Ropes & Gray LLP in Washington, D.C.

His roots near Fargo, North Dakota brought him back to the upper Midwest in 2012, and he joined Briol & Benson in 2013. When not writing briefs, he enjoys reading books to his children, running, and Jayhawk basketball.

He is admitted to practice in Minnesota, North Dakota, and the District of Columbia.
